BEWARE THE SANDMAN-HE'LL PUT YOU TO SLEEP. . FOREVERA serial killer on the loose, a woman with a psychotic stalker and a homicide detective who must find the connection before it's too late. He collects women. Imprisons them. Plays with them. Tortures them. He gathers souvenirs. His trophies are many. LOCK YOUR DOORS AND PULL THE SHADES Meagan McInnis is being psychologically tormented. Her dog has become restless. He barks incessantly, but when peering out into the darkened abyss, there's no one in sight. The image of a pair of eyes staring back from the pitch haunts her. The phone startles her awake, only dead air answers her plea. Until the night she stumbles upon a grisly display in her garden. THE CALLER IS SILENT NO MORE Seasoned, Homicide Detective, J.J. Thomas, is working his most horrific case to date, and he's seen some pretty gruesome things in his time. The monster he's hunting ranks up there with Ed Gein. He wouldn't be surprised to find lampshades made out of human skin in the psycho's living room. THEY CALL HIM THE SANDMAN With no one else available, Thomas is called out to a crime scene in the wee hours of the morning. He's told to pass the case off as soon as possible, so he can focus on his own investigation. But that's before he realizes the ghastly exhibit and his case are linked. Better yet, that Meagan McInnis, is the key to discovering the Sandman's true identity. SWEET DREAMS With his department grossly understaffed, only he and his partner, Shadowhawk, can see to Meagan's safety. At the same time delve deep into her past to uncover just how she became the

In Self-Knowledge and Resentment, Akeel Bilgrami argues that self-knowledge of our intentional states is special among all the knowledges we have because it is not an epistemological notion in the standard sense of that term, but instead is a fallout of the radically normative nature of thought and agency. Four themes or questions are brought together into an integrated philosophical position: What makes self-knowledge different from other forms of knowledge? What makes for freedom and agency in a deterministic universe? What makes intentional states of a subject irreducible to its physical and functional states? And what makes values irreducible to the states of nature as the natural sciences study them? This integration of themes into a single and systematic picture of thought, value, agency, and self-knowledge is essential to the book's aspiration and argument. Once this integrated position is fully in place, the book closes with a postscript on how one might fruitfully view the kind of self-knowledge that is pursued in psychoanalysis.

Taking a cue from Frans de Waal's seminal work examining the lives of chimpanzees, Anne Innis Dagg probes the lives of older mammals and birds. Synthesizing the available scientific research and anecdotal evidence, she explores how aging affects the lives and behavior of animals ranging from elk to elephants and gulls to gorillas, examining such topics as longevity; how others in a group view senior members in regard to leadership, wisdom, and teaching; mating success; interactions with mates and offspring; how aging affects dominance; changes in aggressive behavior and adaptability; and death and dying.

Examining a century of university history, Larry Cuban tackles the age-old question: What is more important, teaching or research? Using two departments (history and medicine) at Stanford University as a case study, Cuban shows how universities have organizationally and politically subordinated teaching to research for over one hundred years. He explains how university reforms, decade after decade, not only failed to dislodge the primacy of research but actually served to strengthen it. He examines the academic work of research and teaching to determine how each has influenced university structures and processes, including curricular reform. Can the dilemma of scholars vs. teachers ever be
