Online Library Globalisation

Globalisation and the Roman World (2014), edited by myself and Miguel John Versluys (Leiden University), is a new book that examines the case for understanding the ancient Roman world as one of the earliest examples of globalisation. This is a controversial project, not least because many

Online Library Globalisation

Roman historians and archaeologists feel that the word globalisation is inappropriate to use when discussing the ancient world.

Road to success: Roman globalisation. In 312 BC, Appius Claudius set out to build a road from Rome to the south of Italy. So began the extensive road network that, argues Ray Laurence, paved the way for commercial domination of the Roman world. The Romans believed that
