The T-JTA measures common personality variables or attitudes and behavioral tendencies, which influence personal, social, marital, parental, family, scholastic and vocational adjustment.

This study examined the relationship of the Taylor-Johnson Temperament Analysis (T-JTA) scores and demographic information of compliance and non-compliance with treatment of individuals who were court referred as a result of driving under the influence of intoxicants (DUII). the study consisted of 239 (118 compliant males; 82 non-compliant males; 22 compliant females; 7 non-compliant females) subjects referred to Tillamook Counseling, Inc. over a six year period for drunk driving offenses. the first hypothesis held there is no significant difference between the Taylor-Johnson Temperament Analysis profiles of Compliant DUII clients and the Taylor-Johnson Temperament Analysis profiles of Non-compliant DUII clients which would make the T-JTA test a possible prognostic tool to determine risk of non-compliance during treatment. the second hypothesis held that both groups are from the same population, and there is no significant difference between attributes (i.e., age, race, marital status, family history, alcohol & drug use history, BAC level at time of arrest, social contacts, occupation, education, frequency of use, age first started, prior attempts to stop drinking, medical complications, psychosocial stressors, financial status, past legal history, family history of alcohol/drug use, level of denial) of Compliant DUII clients and those of Non-compliant DUII clients which may be factors in risk of non-compliance versus compliance during treatment. For males, all Taylor-Johnson scales showed a significant relationship (p $

"With an emphasis on the American West, Eugenic Nation explores the long and unsettled history of eugenics in the United States. This expanded second edition includes shocking details that demonstrate that the story is far from over. Alexandra Minna Stern explores the unauthorized sterilization of female inmates in California state prisons and ongoing reparations for North Carolina victims of sterilization, as well as the topics of race-based intelligence tests, school segregation, the U.S. Border Patrol, tropical medicine, the environmental movement, and opposition to better breeding. Radically new and relevant, this edition draws from recently uncovered historical records to demonstrate patterns of racial bias in California's sterilization program and to recover personal experiences of reproductive injustice. Stern connects the eugenic past to the genomic present with attention to the ethical and social implications of emerging genetic technologies"--Provided by publisher.
